(The Essential Jung, Carl Jung and Anthony Storr) According to Jung archetypes are psychic structures which are common to all humans and constitute 'the archaic heritage of humanity'. Archetypes can be described as cognitive categories, or predispositions that humans are born with to think, feel, perceive and act in specific ways.

Well, if you're looking for an "introduction", read the last book Carl Jung put out before his passing away in 1961 - Man and His Symbols. It was intended to be an overview of his ideas for a layperson audience. Out of the five parts of this book, Jung himself wrote Part 1: 'Approaching the Unconscious'.
